police headquarters Inspector Boardman detailed Detectives Hartigan, McNamee and Browne to assist the precinct officers in making the investigation.

As Ashton surrendered so soon after th deed was committed there was nothing for the officers to do except to get the evidence together and fix the crime on the prisoner. It developed that Ashton after leaving the scene of the murder entered a saloon and took a drink. He also bought two cigars and was smoking one of them when he entered the police station. It was several minutes after he appeared at the station before he intimated that he had committed

He realized that a tight was in cogress, and when he heard the woman eading with Ashion, asking him not to ill her he got on his wagon and drove way. He old this, he said, because he lought the police would come and he do. not want his employer to know he had been there. Reed did not know of the mar-der until he was found by the detectives at his employer's place of business.

Ashton was measured and photographed teday before being taken to the sixth precinct station, where he was present at the inquest, which was begun at 2 o'clock

William Reed, the colored man who was held as a witness, was first examined at the inquest. He lives at No. 2407 I street northwest. The witness told the jury that he called at the house on 19th street between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday. When he called on Ida Jackson, he saw the defendant seated at the table drinking beer with the woman. Ida, he said, offered him of The Star.

Jackson were apparently having trouble.
Witness heard the man using profane language. While he was drinking a glass of beer in Miss Shorter's room he heard Ida Jackson call "murder." Then he got on his wagon and went in search of an officer.
Witness said he had seen Ashton at Ida's rooms three times. He had known the woman since his boyhood days, and had stop-

May Shorter, who lives in the house where the crime was committed, and Mr. James P. Loveday, who lives next door, were then examined, and then Dr. Sterling Ruffin told of the wounds he found on the dead woman's person.

Lieut, Boyle told of the prisoner's arrest and of his saying that he only used his hands and feet to assault the woman.
"Then he admitted that he killed the woman?" the coroner asked.
"He did," answered witness.

When Lieut, Boyle had concluded his tes-imony the case was submitted. The jury returned a verdict holding Ashton responsible for the woman's death, and he was com-

UPSETTING BIG CHIMNEYS, The Modern Way of Tearing Down a

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. With a crash that was heard for several blocks one of the immense chimneys of the old Belcher sugar refinery at Dickson and Lewis streets was overturned the other day and 200,000 bricks piled in a confused mass of debris. This was the second of the three chimneys of the old factory to fall, and till another remains to be thrown down. For some time a gang of men, under the lirection of Contractor P. W. Hassett, has been tearing down the old refinery to make room for the erection of a new building, to be devoted to cold storage. The work of dismantling the building was no small task, but when it came to tearing down the immense chimneys, each over 160 feet in height, it was decided that the old system was entirely too slow to be followed in this case. Instead, the great chimneys, weighing scores of tons each, were undermined on one side. Then ropes were made fast to on one side. Then ropes were made fast to a hawser, which had been tied about the chimney at a height of sixty feet. These ropes were fastened to "crabs" placed at an angle of 46 degrees from the path in which it was intended that the chimney should take. Three powerful hydraulic jacks, capable of lifting 20,000 pounds each, were placed beneath the side of the chimney on which the excavations had been made and when all was in readiness all the preparations were inspected to see that no

Then the word was given to all to stand clear. About the spot were gathered quite a number of curiesity seekers, who were present to see one of the largest chimneys in the city torn down at one swoop. Eight men placed themselves at each "crab," and men were at the jackscrews. Then at a given signal the men at the jackscrews. nien were at the jackscrews. Then at a given signal the men at the "crabs" began winding the cables about the drums. The men at the jackscrews began elevating that side of the chimney, and when the first preside of the chimney, and when the first pre-liminary crackle of the strained structure came, promptly fled to a point of safety. The men at the ends of the long cables continued their work, which was punc-tuated by more crumbling and groaning as the massive masonry shivered and trem-bled. Then in a few moments the top of the chimney sagged and came toppling downward. The base of the chimney fell more rapidly than did the top, causing the chimney to break into two portlons, which closed up, jackknife fashion, just as the base struck the ground with a crash and a struck the ground with a crash and a rumble. A great cloud of dust, through which bits of brick rebounded, arose, and five minutes later the workmen were clear-ing away the debris.

preparations were inspected to see that no

hitch would occur

It was estimated by the contractor that in the chimney torn down yesterday 200,000 bricks were used. The chimney was 160 feet high, 8½ feet square at the base and 4½ feet in diameter at the top. If you want work read the want columns INTELLIGENT PACK MULES. During Their Army Experience They Learn a Good Many Things. From the New Orleans Times Democrat.

"In the government service," said an ex-soldier, "the pack trains are led by a bell mare and the mules learn to follow her with a blind confidence that is astonishing. After the surrender of Santiago the army of occupation had several pack trains that were kept in a big corral near the camp. One day Gen. Breckinridge came to visit Gen. Shafter, who at that time had shifted his headquarters to a point near little. San Juan Hill, and how to provide him with a saddle animal was a serious question. The climate of south Cuba had proven very hard on our horses and they were nearly all dead or disabled. In fact, the only respectable looking beast we could scrape up was a bell mare belonging to one of the trains, and the order was accordingly given to saddle her up.

"The general mounted and was riding away toward headquarters, when suddenly most hideous and unearthly tumult broke ose from the corral. The mules had caught sight of their leader and were frantically endeavoring to get out and follow, each one braying at the top of his lungs and every bray in a different key. It was the most horrible row ever heard in the prov-ince since the bombardment of Morro Cas-tle, and for the time being it looked as if the crazy mules were going to tear down the stockade. Gen. Breckinridge was startled and reined up to investigate, but meanwhile a dozen packers had jumped into the corral and went to work on the brutes with clubs, trying to get them running around in a circle, so as to distract their attention. At last they succeeded and the general fortunately disappeared down the road before the drove came to a standstill again. He would have cut a unique figure if he had ridden up to Shafter's tent leading a solemn cavalcade of sixty-four gov-ernment mules, and that is exactly what would have happened had it not been for the presence of mind of the packers.

"A pack mule that has seen service gets very cunning. I remember we had one old fellow who had been in the army for twelve or fifteen years and he knew as much as most of the men. He was occasionally used as leader and was very fond of the job, because in that case he had no load to carry. To see him maneuvering to get to the front was very comical. The regulation pack weighs 200 pounds, and the mules soon learn to size it up to a nicety, refusing to carry anything more. For that rea-son they are blindfolded while being load-ed; otherwise they would be continually looking around to see whether the pacl was inside the limit.

"On one occasion we received a coffinto be sent to Stboney and the old mule I referred to was selected to carry it. The coffin weighed only twenty-five pounds, but the mule must have concluded from its size that it weighed a ton, and he immediately began to groan in the most pitiful manner, exactly like a human being. When the coffin was put on his back he pretended to stagger and sagged down as if he was carrying a 10-inch gun. At the same time he turned his head and looked at me with a mournful expression that was as easily read as so much print: 'Good heavens!' he seemed to say, 'are you going to allow me to be crushed by this enormous burden? We were all shricking with laughter and tried to make him take his place in line, but not an inch would he budge. Finally he deliberately rolled over and knocked the coffin off. That settled it. We coffin off. That settled it. We let the old rascal take the bell and I could almost hear him chuckling as it was looped around his neck. Another mule was then blindfolded and took on the coffin without trouble."

GOLDEN EAGLES WON THREE. Tied With Two Others in the Local

Bowling League. The Golden Eagle and Saengerbund bowling teams played league ten pins at the Saengerbund alleys last night, and the result was highly satisfactory to the Eagle five. Recently the Saengers went to the Eagle alleys, and while the advantage is usually conceded to the home club, beat their opponents in three games. Last night the Eagles had sweet revenge, for bowling a fine series, two of the totals passing 800, they came away with three victories, thus tieing the leading clubs for first place in the league, and shoving the Saengers down from that exalted position.

The Golden Eagle five played nearer the form that is expected of them from the individual records of their men than previously this season. With the exception of Diemer, the new man, every player made a good average, and by consistent work, too, since none of the totals were extremely Spiess continued his accustomed good bowling for the Saengers, and has an excellent average for the evening's work, also leading both sides with 210 for high game. Jorss, who succeeded Meyers after the cpening game, did good work, despite the fact that his hand is still unit for bowling. The team will be stronger after his perma-nent return to its ranks. Berens also re-tired from the Saengers after the start of the second game, his long absence from the game having a marked effect on his bowling. Ford ucceeded him and was an improvement of his predecessor. Honors were easy in the early frames of the opening game, both sides doing fairly well. Bruegger's double in the middle boxes gave the visitors an advantage that was not overcome, and toward the end the lead was materially increased, so the totals were 78 pins apart at the finish. The score follows: Saengerbund.
